

Presentation:

Environmental Psychology has undergone an important scientific and institutional development in the last two decades. Psicamb and ARPEnv, had contributed to this evolution, providing their professional staff and scientific scenarios for supporting the research networks and communicate the most important findings.

The meeting in February 2016, entitled "Current Challenges of Environmental Psychology", carried out in the University of Nîmes, was an example of the extraordinary commitment of professionals from France, Portugal, Spain and other countries, to strengthen the bonds between scientists who work in complementary subjects in different countries.

Now we have another opportunity to meet again and think together in the near future of environmental psychology research. A new scenario is coming, motivated by the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, and by local and international financial calls that answer the challenges of environmental risk scenarios and the human problems associated with the local activity, individual consumption, social response, and political commitment to face the climate change agenda.

In Albacete, as in Nîmes, with the support of the Vice-Rectorate for Research of the University of Castilla-La Mancha, we have another chance to meet again and think the future of our cooperation together, sharing our experience and know-how about the structure of scientific grants and cooperation. This is an opportunity to materialize our projects. Come to work and dream with us.
